Readers of Yesterday's Want Ads.

The circulation of The Times yesterday was over 46,000 copies.

The Times is a "home" paper-it goes into the homes of its readers-it is read and respected by every member of the Men who know estimate that each copy of a "home newspaper is read by from four to six people.

Taking the lower figure, for example, The Times had yesterday 184,000 readers.

What an audience for the classified advertiser! If only seven out of every ten readers of a newspaper read the classified pages-and surely that is a very fair estimate-yesterday's classified advertisers addressed 128,800 Times readers.

There is no better medium for classified advertising than the newspaper with the guaranteed largest circulation.
